

NORTH EASTERN RAILWAY

Although the NER did not serve London it was, by any definition, a major undertaking that carried huge amounts of traffic on a system of about 1,700 route miles. In 1898, it was estimated that the company was carrying no less than 46,000,000 tons of goods per annum, making it the most important freight-carrying line in the country. The NER operated a major section of the East Coast Main Line, together with a complex network of branch lines and cross-country routes in the north-east of England.
