IRISH RAILWAYS & CHANNEL ISLANDS

Grouping of the Irish railways was impeded by civil war and partition. All lines situated wholly within Northern Ireland became part of the LMS while, by 1925, all lines situated wholly within the Irish Free State had become part of the Great Southern Railways. However, cross-border lines such as the Great Northern Railway (Ireland), which crossed the border in one or more places, remained "un-grouped" and, in this anomalous condition, they remained in operation as independent undertakings for many years. The following list of photographs from the Lens of Sutton Collection is, where appropriate, arranged by Pregrouping company. Most photographs date from the GSR period, although a minority are from the Pregrouping or CIE/UTA eras.
