LONDON & SOUTH WESTERN RAILWAY: PART 1

With a main line from London to Cornwall, and important lines to Portsmouth, Southampton and Bournemouth, the L&SWR was the largest of the Southern companies. In Victorian times, the L&SWR had been dominated by Liberal, Nonconformist interests and, as such, it became a natural ally of the Midland Railway and a bitter rival of the GWR. The following list of station views from the Lens of Sutton Collection includes L&SWR lines west of Salisbury and Bournemouth, together with certain independent lines such as the Plymouth, Devonport & South Western Junction Railway (PDSWJR), the Lynton & Barnstaple Railway (L&BR) and the Bideford, Westward Ho! & Appledore Railway (BWHA).
