GREAT WESTERN RAILWAY STATIONS: OXFORD WORCESTER & WOLVERHAMPTON RAILWAY

In addition to its main line between Oxford and Wolverhampton (Low Level), the OW&WR company sponsored or supported a number of branch lines and cross-country routes, including the Severn Valley, Witney, Chipping Norton and Stratford-upon-Avon lines. The OW&WR later changed its name to "The West Midland Railway", and as such, the undertaking was amalgamated with the GWR in 1863. Further lines were added under GWR auspices to create a network of main lines and secondary routes in the Cotswolds and Welsh border areas. The following list of station views from the Lens of Sutton Collection encompasses the OW&WR system at its fullest extent, the Great Western additions having been included, together with certain local stations in the Oxford area. For completeness, the list includes stations on the Cleobury Mortimer & Ditton Priors Railway (CM&DPR), which retained its independence until the Grouping.
